

with / in sight

3.29.22

→ how are cancer
researchers fighting covid-19?

The Koch Institute for Integrative Cancer Research at MIT cordially invites you to attend SCIENCE with/in/sight: How Are Cancer Researchers Fighting COVID-19? showcasing the work of MIT faculty and clinical investigators to address urgent and pressing needs related to the COVID-19 pandemic.

The third in a series of COVID-specific with/in/sight events, this evening's program will present updates from three projects begun in Spring 2020.

TUESDAY, MARCH 29, 2022 AT 5:30 P.M. EDT

→ Join us in-person at the Koch Institute
500 Main Street, Cambridge
Click here for details and registration

→ Join us on Zoom
Click here to register

PRESENTERS

→ Angela Belcher, PhD
Novel materials for PPE
James Mason Crafts Professor;
Head, MIT Department of Biological Engineering

→ Hojun Li, MD, PhD
On-demand protective immunity testing
Charles W. (1955) and Jennifer C.
Johnson Clinical Investigator

→ Michael Yaffe, MD, PhD
Overcoming respiratory distress
David H. Koch Professor of Science;
Intensive Care Physician, Beth
Israel Deaconess Medical Center

→ Moderated by Jane Wilkinson
Executive Director
Koch Institute at MIT

Questions? Contact Becca Hoff at kievents@mit.edu or (617) 324-7794
In-person attendees must abide by MIT's safety protocols, including vaccination.